Website focus group wanted

Shoalhaven City Council is looking for interested community members to participate in a website focus group.

A new prototype website is currently being exhibited at <http://demo.shoalhaven.nsw.gov.au/> and all members of the community are invited to comment about the sample layout, navigational and design aspects of the site.

The focus group will be assisting Council's Website Project team in making important decisions about the overall usability of this new website.

It's important that external users find the website informative, attractive and simple to use and a focus group can guide council in building a functional and dynamic online environment during the project delivery.

Information Technology Manager John Lenehan is keen to engage with the community to find out what is a best fit for the online needs and requirements of our council website.

"There's a lot of creative and technologically minded people in the Shoalhaven that could bring skills and knowledge to the focus group and have input to the new site." he said.

Anyone interested in being part of a focus group can email feedback@shoalhaven.nsw.gov.au by 7th November.
